Biopsychosocial Model in Public Health Taukeni, Simon George, 2023-02-20 It is generally well established that the biomedical model is informed on the assumption that the occurrence of the disease is the result of biological molecules inside the body This is seen in the view of the biopsychosocial model that the biomedical model is excluding the importance of psychological social economic environmental spiritual and behavioral dimensions of the illness It is essential to create better awareness to accelerate the use of the biopsychosocial model focusing on the individual as a whole rather than the illness alone Acceleration of the Biopsychosocial Model in Public Health accelerates the inclusion of the biopsychosocial model in the public health sector in order to achieve universal health coverage It provides a better understanding of the role of various factors such as psychological social emotional economic and behavioral that are responsible for the development of diseases in order to develop comprehensive prevention and intervention measures Covering topics such as psychological well being public health awareness and system dynamics this premier reference source is an excellent resource for public health officials health therapists health educators health psychologists occupational therapists palliative care providers community healthcare providers hospital administrators health professionals medical students medical libraries researchers and academicians Living with the Dragon Benjamin I Page, Tao Xie, 2010-06-11 It is widely believed that most Americans not only distrust but also despise China Considering the country s violent political history unprecedented economic rise and growing military capabilities China has become America s strongest market competitor and arguably the most challenging global threat to the United States Nevertheless a full consideration of American opinion proves the opposite to be true Carefully analyzing all available polls and surveys Benjamin I Page and Tao Xie find most Americans favor peaceful engagement with China The public view has been surprisingly coherent and consistent changing only in response to major events and new information While a majority of Americans are not happy that China s economy is projected to become as large as that of the United States they are prepared to live with it Unfair Chinese trade practices and their impact on American jobs and wages are a concern along with the quality and safety of Chinese made goods However Americans favor free trade with China provided it is tempered with environmental and workplace protections They also believe that the United States should balance Chinese power through alliances with neighboring countries such as Japan Yet they oppose military action to defend Taiwan Page and Xie examine these opinions in relation to facts about China and in light of current U S debates on diplomacy and policy
