Van Pilsum, Diabetes and Protein Glycosylation Margo Panush Cohen,2012-12-06 In the years since the initial discovery that blood from diabetic patients contains increased amounts of a posttranslationally gluco sylated form of hemoglobin hemoglobin Ale an impressive number of studies have clarified and expanded the use of glycohemoglobin levels to assess disease status Many other structural proteins have been shown to undergo similar changes including proteins from tissues most commonly affected in diabetes e g lens aorta peripheral nerve basement membrane Thus the nonenzymatic glycosylation of hemoglobin emerges as an invaluable model for the pathogenesis of certain chronic diabetes complications In addition to reviewing a wealth of investigative possibilities in the area of these chronic complications including eye kidney nerve and vascular disease Dr Cohen indicates how enhanced nonenzymatic glycosylation in uncontrolled diabetes underscores the pressing need for maintenance of long term euglycemia

Dr Cohen is an endocrinologist and diabetes specialist whose research activities have largely focused on the chemistry and metabolism of the basement membrane in diabetes This superb monograph on nonenzymatic glycosylation clearly shows the major trends of her past and present research and clinical activities This book is beautifully written and a pleasure to read It provides great insight into the mechanisms of the pathogenesis of the oom vii viii Foreword cations of diabetes and should be of immense value not only to basic and clinical investigators but also to internists diabetologists and endocrinologists in clinical practice

The Neuroimmunological Basis of Behavior and Mental Disorders Allan Siegel, Steven S. Zalcman, 2008-11-09 For many years the immune and central nervous systems were thought to function independently with little or no interaction between the two This view has undergone dramatic changes over the past three decades Indeed we now know that there exists various feedback loops between the brain and immune systems that impact significantly upon different behavioral processes including normal behavior and mental disorders Pioneering efforts in generating this change were initiated by a number of early investigators Included were those whose efforts were directed at establishing neuroimmune connections as well as others whose research focused upon the relationship between immunity cytokines and behavior This book brings together outstanding scientists and clinicians who have made major contributions to the rapidly developing field investigating the relationship between immunity and behavior The book is divided into three parts The first part describes pathways by which the brain and immune systems communicate and interact with each other In the chapter Cytokines and the Blood Brain Barrier provides insight into interactions between the blood brain barrier and cytokines Such interactions underlie basic communication between the immune system and brain that are present in normal as well as in disease conditions In the chapter Neurochemical and Endocrine Responses to Immune Activation The Role of Cytokines the neurochemical and endocrine consequences of immune challenge and cytokine administration on central neurotransmitter activity are discussed

Raspberry Julie Graham, Rex Brennan, 2018-11-12 Raspberry is a globally significant soft fruit crop with increasing interest to consumers due to its versatility and health related constituents In this background context it is therefore timely to consider the present and future status of the raspberry crop particularly with the advances in the use of molecular tools and plant phenotyping to improve our understanding of improving crop quality and fruit yields Since the 1980s a wealth of fundamental genomics and metabolomics resources have been developed for soft fruits including linkage maps physical maps QTLs and expression tools However a number of serious and emerging challenges exist for the raspberry industry including the plant's ability to resist major pest and disease burdens and the impact of climate change on crop production specifically water use and water availability for soft fruit crops This book aims to address some of these challenges by updating the information known about this important crop its health value the major pest and diseases which affect raspberry and approaches for their control and the speed and precision offered by selective breeding programs by the deployment of molecular tools and linkage maps for germplasm assessment Understanding the genetic control of commercially and nutritionally important traits and the linkage of these characteristics to molecular markers on chromosomes is the future basis of plant breeding We will also introduce the opportunity to fast track breeding by improving the speed of phenotypic selection by utilizing imaging sensor technologies thereby reducing the cost of years of field assessment through developing this knowledge into markers linked to key fruit traits The chapters of this book will span the knowledge gained from the collaborations between growers plant breeders plant physiologists soil scientists geneticists agronomists and physicists which is essential to achieve progress in improving productivity and a sustainable industry

Fine Sediment Dynamics in the Marine Environment Johan C. Winterwerp, C. Kranenburg, 2002-06-05 Cohesive sediment or mud is encountered in most water bodies throughout the world Often mud is a valuable resource synonymous with fertile land enriching the natural environment and used as an important building material Yet mud also hinders navigation and consequently dredging operations have been carried out since ancient times to safeguard navigation Unfortunately many mud deposits are now contaminated endangering the ecosystem and increasing the costs of dredging operations The transport and fate of mud in the environment are still poorly understood and the need for basic research remains This text contains the proceedings of the INTERCOH 2000 conference on progress in cohesive sediment research It was the sixth in a series of conferences initially started by Professor Ashish Mehta in 1984 as a Workshop on Cohesive Sediment Dynamics with Special Reference to the Processes in Estuaries During these conferences the character of the first workshop has always been maintained that is small scale and dedicated to the physical and engineering aspects of cohesive sediments without parallel sessions but with ample time for discussions during and after the presentations and followed by a book of proceedings containing thoroughly reviewed papers INTERCOH 2000 was integrated with the final workshop of the COSINUS project This project was carried out as a part of the European MAST 3 programme and almost all European cohesive sediment workers were involved INTERCOH 2000 focused on the behaviour and modelling of concentrated benthic suspensions i.e. high concentrated near bed suspensions of cohesive sediment Special attention was paid to sediment turbulence interaction flocculation and settling velocity high concentrated mud suspensions processes in the bed consolidation processes on the bed erosion field observations on mud dynamics instrumentation and numerical modelling
