EIB Working Papers 2018/08 - Debt overhang and investment efficiency European Investment Bank, 2019-04-29 Using a pan European data set of 8 5 million firms this paper finds that firms with high debt overhang invest relatively more than otherwise similar firms if they are operating in sectors facing good global growth opportunities At the same time the positive impact of a marginal increase in debt on investment efficiency disappears if firm debt is already excessive if it is dominated by short maturities and during systemic banking crises The results are consistent with theories of the disciplining role of debt as well as with models highlighting the negative link between agency problems at firms and banks and investment efficiency
