Cellular fluctuations, alpha-fetoprotein expression, and the question of stem cells in experimental liver regeneration and hepatocarcinogenesis Wolf-Dieter Kuhlmann, Karlheinz Wurster, 2023-05-25 Hepatocytes and bile ductular cells possess stem like potential in restoring liver tissue This was derived from rat and mouse injury models such as a partial hepatectomy by surgery b acute carbon tetrachloride intoxication injuries by D galactosamine GalN or by N nitrosomorpholine NNM d experimental hepatocarcinogenesis with NNM using different doses Liver parenchyma was restored by adult hepatocytes after partial hepatectomy as well as after carbon tetrachloride intoxication Concurrently hepatocytes resumed synthesis of alpha 1 fetoprotein AFP which depended to a high degree on the animal species and strains used in that studies In contrast to this way of regeneration liver repair after heavy injuries by agents such as GalN and NNM was initiated by oval cell proliferation deriving from ductular epithelial cells of the canaliculi of HERING canals of Hering intrahepatic bile ductules as sources of endogenous progenitors Progenitor populations reach levels of differentiation with fetal gene reactivation and significant AFP expression Proliferating oval cells operated as transit and amplification compartment during liver regeneration Oval cell proliferation and concurrent AFP synthesis occurred also in the early stages of hepatocarcinogenesis when the carcinogen NNM was applied in toxic doses The histologic features compared to those seen in GalN intoxication NNM carcinogenicity was of concern for both oval cells and adult hepatocytes with risks of transformation and malignant development At the cancer stage carcinomas either synthesizing AFP or not can be found side by side in the same liver AFP expression by cancer cells seems to be a special attribute to differentiation stages in carcinogenesis Clonality maturation arrest and retro differentiation feature cells with high autonomy in Cancer Treatment Engineering Properties of Nickel and Nickel Alloys John Everhart, 2012-12-06 Nickel is probably the most versatile of the metallic elements Among alloys containing nickel are some having high corrosion resistance and others that retain excellent strength and ductility from temperatures approaching absolute zero to those near 2000 F Some nickel alloys are strongly magnetic others are virtually nonmagnetic some have low rates of thermal expansion others have high rates some have high electrical resistivities some have practically constant moduli of elasticity one has an elastic memory In addition nickel is magnetostrictive With this wide range of characteristics it is not surprising that there are several thousand alloys containing nickel It is impossible to consider all of these compositions in this publication and therefore several alloys in each of a number of categories have been selected to indicate the properties to be expected of the group Low alloy and constructional nickel containing steels have been excluded on two grounds To do them justice would require excessive space and in addition their applications differ generally from these of the materials under discussion On the other hand nickel containing stainless steels have been included because many of their applications fall into the same areas as those of a number of the high nickel alloys Many of the compositions discussed are proprietary alloys and they are protected by trademarks A list of the trademarks and their owners is included in the appendix
