16142235:

Experimental and Clinical Evidence of the Neuropathology of Parkinson's Disease Draoui, Ahmed, El Hiba, Omar, Jayakumar, Arumugam R., 2023-08-04 Parkinson's disease is the second most common neurodegenerative disorder in the world after Alzheimer's disease. Thanks to the pioneering works of Arvid Carlsson in the 20th century identifying dopamine as the main neurochemical agent involved in Parkinson's disease's onset and progress, our understanding of the neuropathology has increased. The elaboration of L-Dopa as the first pharmacological treatment approach has brought new hope for curing or at least slowing the neurodegenerative progress and the decline of motor and cognitive functions in Parkinson's disease patients. To date, imaging techniques along with genetic and biochemical tools have allowed scientists and clinicians to predict and diagnose the disease several years prior to the motor disorder's appearance. Experimental and Clinical Evidence of the Neuropathology of Parkinson's Disease sheds light on the history of Parkinson's disease as well as the recent literature on the epidemiological data worldwide, including the prevalence of the disease, the morbidity and mortality rates, and the sex dimorphism and aging components. It addresses the current neuropathological evidence of Parkinson's disease, including the latest discoveries in terms of neuropathology and treatments available or under clinical trials, with the efficacy and limitations of each. Covering topics such as epidemiology, stem cells, and neuropathology, this premier reference source is an excellent resource for clinicians, physicians, epidemiologists, neuroscientists, microbiologists, biochemists, pharmacologists, toxicologists, medical professionals, nurses, medical students, and educators, librarians, researchers, and academicians.

Cormier, 1966     The London DMS Matthew Wharmby, 2016-11-30 Vilified as the great failure of all London Transport bus classes, the DMS family of Daimler Fleetline was more like an unlucky victim of straitened times. Desperate to match staff shortages with falling demand for its services during the late 1960s, London Transport was just one organization to see nationwide possibilities and savings in legislation that was about to permit double-deck one-man operation and partially fund purpose-built vehicles. However, prohibited by circumstances from developing its own rear-engined Routemaster FRM concept, LT instituted comparative trials between contemporary Leyland Atlanteans and Daimler Fleetlines. The latter came out on top, and massive orders followed. The first DMSs entering service on 2 January 1971. In service, however, problems quickly manifested Sophisticated safety features served only to burn out gearboxes and gulp fuel The passengers meanwhile did not appreciate being funnelled through the DMS s recalcitrant automatic fare collection machinery only to have to stand for lack of seating Boarding speeds thus slowed to a crawl to the extent that the savings made by laying off conductors had to be negated by adding more DMSs to converted routes Second thoughts caused the ongoing order to be amended to include crew operated Fleetlines DMs noise concerns prompted the development of the B20 quiet bus variety and brave attempts were made to fit the buses into the time honored system of overhauling at Aldenham Works but finally the problems proved too much After enormous expenditure the first DMSs began to be withdrawn before the final RTs came out of service and between 1979 and 1983 all but the B20s were sold as is widely known the DMSs proved perfectly adequate with provincial operators once their London features had been removed OPO was to become fashionable again in the 1980s as the politicians turned on London Transport itself breaking it into pieces in order to sell it off Not only did the B20 DMSs survive to something approaching a normal lifespan but the new cheap operators awakening with the onset of tendering made use of the type to undercut LT and it was not until 1993 that the last DMS operated
