The Acme Pizza Company has engaged you to develop a database to facilitate the delivery of pizzas. To this end draw a logical data model for the following situation. Use the methodology from the Erwin software. Show all cardinality, prime keys and foreign keys. Use verbs to clarify your relationships. Show the attributes that are contained explicitly in the case. Create new attributes for identifiers etc only if absolutely required. Where you consider it necessary document assumptions.

Acme Pizza's delivery system services numerous franchised stores in the city. Retained for each store is the telephone number, address and store number. When a customer first calls in they are associated with the nearest outlet based on the first 3 digits of their phone#. A store may be the designated outlet for several different 3 digit codes. A customer's phone#, name and address will also be recorded and retained. Employee information for each store is maintained and for each employee their name, employee id and job classification code. One of the employees is designated as the store manager. Each classification code has a standard description (such as pizza chef, delivery driver, etc) and associated hourly rate. A daily work schedule for each employee is retained with start time and end time for each day. The schedule usually covers a 2 week period. Acme offers a number of standard pizzas. Each has its own description and a base price. A customer may add toppings. Each topping has its own code and description, as well as price. Not all toppings are available for all pizzas but many are available for more than one pizza. This availability information needs to be accessible by the person processing the order so they can advise customers. Once a customer has placed an order for a pizza, the order date and time (30 minutes or its free), as well as the type of pizza and toppings are retained in the database. Active orders will be assigned to a driver who will call in the time the pizza was actually delivered for recording in the database.

(Note: To simplify the problem only pizzas (and toppings) are sold and only one per customer at a time)
