Rujescu,2016 Suicide is one of the most important causes of death in modern societies To develop more effective preventive measures we have to be aware of and learn more about its neurobiological foundations In recent years the tools of modern neurosciences have increasingly been utilized to characterize the pathophysiology of complex human behaviors such as suicide To improve suicide risk assessment and suicide prevention a better understanding of its pathophysiology is crucial This includes research from a variety of disciplines such as neuropsychological psychosocial and cultural studies but also findings from biochemistry neuropathology electrophysiology immunology neuroimaging genetics and epigenetics Important results have for example been obtained in the field of gene environment interaction and suicidal behavior We have just begun to understand how early life adversity may increase suicide risk by epigenetic mechanisms Based on such insights novel therapeutic interventions and preventive measures can be developed Furthermore a better understanding of the pathophysiological mechanisms involved in suicidal behavior could reveal the mechanism of compounds like lithium salts In this book suicidal behavior and its prevention is discussed by international experts in the light of the most recent results from a broad spectrum of neurosciences

The Neurobiological Basis of Suicide Yogesh Dwivedi, 2012-06-25 With recent studies using genetic epigenetic and other molecular and neurochemical approaches a new era has begun in understanding pathophysiology of suicide Emerging evidence suggests that neurobiological factors are not only critical in providing potential risk factors but also provide a promising approach to develop more effective treatment and prevention strategies The Neurobiological Basis of Suicide discusses the most recent findings in suicide neurobiology Psychological psychosocial and cultural factors are important in determining the risk factors for suicide however they offer weak prediction and can be of little clinical use Interestingly cognitive characteristics are different among depressed suicidal and depressed nonsuicidal subjects and could be involved in the development of suicidal behavior The characterization of the neurobiological basis of suicide is in delineating the risk factors associated with suicide The Neurobiological Basis of Suicide focuses on how and why these neurobiological factors are crucial in the pathogenic mechanisms of suicidal behavior and how these findings can be transformed into potential therapeutic applications Environment, Mood Disorders, and Suicide Teodor T.

Postolache, 2011 We live in a time when the environment makes headlines especially in association with global climate change and the potential human impact on the planet It is remarkable that even now with the environment becoming an important issue in world politics we still do not really know how or to what extent our environment interacts with our brain and overall physiology The environment is intricately and from a research standpoint hopelessly multifactorial The effects of global climate change may be readily seen not only in the thermoregulatory response to temperature fluctuation This book discusses the environment and its influence on mood disorders and suicide from a scientific perspective □□□□□□□□□□□□

Myint, Markus J. Schwarz, 2016-10-17 Psychiatric disorders are one of the most dramatic burdens for humankind. Many results are presented here by pioneers in the field.
