In Situ Detection of DNA Damage Vladimir V. Didenko, 2008-02-05 Detection and analysis of DNA damage is of critical importance in a variety of biological disciplines studying apoptosis cell cycle and cell division carcinogenesis tumor growth embryogenesis and aging neurodegenerative and heart diseases anticancer drug development environmental and radiobiological research and others Individual cells within the same tissue or in cell culture may vary in the extent of their DNA damage and consequently can display different reactions to it These differences between individual cells in the same cell population are detected using in situ approaches In situ is a Latin term meaning on site or in place It is used to denote the processes occurring or detected in their place of origin In molecular and cell biology this usually refers to undisrupted mounted cells or tissue sections In that meaning in situ is used as part of the terms in situ PCR in situ transcription in situ hybridization in situ end labeling and in situ ligation Sometimes the in situ term is applied at the subcellular level to cells disrupted in the process of analysis for example in the detection of specific sequences in chromosomes using fluorescent in situ hybridization FISH Historically the term was used primarily in methods dealing with nucleic acids

Apoptosis and Autoimmunity Joachim R. Kalden, Martin Herrmann, 2006-03-06 This is the first comprehensive book about the relationship between apoptosis and autoimmune diseases It offers a unique up to date overview on research results on the defective execution of apoptosis and the incomplete clearance of apoptotic cells The molecular and cellular mechanisms involved are described in detail As a possible consequence of apoptotic dysfunction the development of severe autoimmune diseases e.g. rheumatoid arthritis systemic lupus erythematosus is discussed An outlook on future research topics includes the evaluation of novel therapeutic strategies Validation Criteria and Record Layouts for Electronic Filing of Form 1065, U.S. Partnership Return of Income for Tax Year ..., 1980 Statistics of Income, 1972 Programmed Cell Death in Fungi and the Etiology of Cold Storage Canker of Almond and Other Trees Stephen Mark Marek, 2001

Programmed Cell Death, Volume I S. Estus, V. Rangnekar, M.P. Mattson, 2001 Apoptosis or programmed cell death is an adaptive form of cell death that plays a critical role in turnover of mitotic cells and various tissues in the adult including epithelial cells fibroblasts and various endocrine cells Programmed cell death also plays a major role in development in organizing the body plan and molding intricate cellular structures such as nerve cell circuits in the brain Rapidly progressing research into the molecular and biochemical underpinnings of the programmed cell death process are revealing novel genetic programs and molecular interactions that coordinate a process that results in death and removal of cells without an immune response and in the absence of the adverse effects on neighboring cells Programmed Cell Death Volume I critically details the molecular biochemical and cellular mechanisms of apoptosis This volume covers programmed cell death in a variety of tissues and organ systems highlighting the interesting families of proteins involved in promoting or preventing apoptosis These include the caspase and calpain families of proteases Bcl 2 family members and inhibitors of apoptosis proteins Each chapter is written by an internationally recognized expert in a particular aspect of programmed cell death This book will provide the reader with a comprehensive understanding of the cascade of events leading from an apoptotic signal such as trophic factor withdrawal or increased oxidative stress to cell death Importantly this volume also covers signaling mechanisms designed to prevent apoptosis Such anti apoptotic signaling cascades involve neurotrophic factors and stress response pathways Programmed Cell Death Volume I provides the molecular and cellular foundation for <http://www.elsevier.com/locate/ISBN0444507302> Programmed Cell Death Volume II in which the roles of aberrant regulation of apoptosis in human diseases ranging from cancer to Alzheimer s disease are considered The Trade Marks Journal ,1996-04-03
