Requirements Engineering

Get ready!

- ① Before you read the passage, talk about these questions.
 - 1 What is the purpose of requirements engineering?
 - 2 How are software specifications organized?

ShorSoft Software Developers
Requirements Engineering Department

We understand that functional and user-friendly software comes from well-defined foundations. Therefore, we take great pride in our requirements engineering department. Our engineers perfect every specification for the software that we create.

We primarily create market-driven software for general consumers. However, we also create some customer-driven software for special projects. First, our team makes a detailed requirements document. This is based on elicitation of the requirements. Typically, the information comes from people who will likely use the software. Then, a separate team provides validation and verification for that document. This process prevents mistakes and ensures precision.

We organize requirements by the most appropriate parameters for the software. Specifications can be organized by the mode, user class, or response. In less-common cases, requirements documents are organized by real-life objects. Or they might be determined by some other functional hierarchy.

One way or another, we'll get the job done. For more information about requirements engineering services, contact our customer service department.
