Randomization: the Study of Causal Relationships between Tumors and Underlying Pathogenic Factors Ziheng Wang, Guangsheng Pei,2025-05-15 The malignant tumor is a major global public health problem threatening human health At present association studies can be used to analyze the occurrence and development of tumors Association studies such as the classic study of smoking and lung cancer and the popular genome wide association study GWAS form the basis of medical research These studies provided initial evidence for subsequent mechanistic exploration and functional studies but could not illustrate a causal relationship R A Fisher first proposed the concept and method of Mendelian randomization MR in a 1936 book called The Design of Experiments Based on the principles of Mendelian genetics he regarded randomly assigned genotypes as natural randomization experiments to evaluate the causal effect of a factor on a particular phenotypic trait Mendelian randomization MR is a statistical method based on whole genome sequencing data GWAS which can effectively reduce bias and is used to reveal causality similar to randomized controlled trials RCT MR can be used to evaluate causal inference using genetic variants as instrumental variables to represent specific exposures infer causal relationships between exposures and outcomes and transform phenotype to phenotype causal studies into genotype studies The advantage is that an individual s genetic variation precedes the outcome of a disease which eliminates confounding bias due to reverse causality Modern bioinformatics techniques can measure genetic variation with high precision which largely reduces the estimation bias caused by measurement errors Naturally-Produced Organohalogens Anders Grimvall,Ed W.B. de Leer,2012-12-06 Should the production and use of chlorine and all chlorinated organic compounds be halted in view of their adverse effects on the environment and human health Those in favour argue that certain chlorinated compounds PCBs DDT CFCs etc have large negative environmental effects The use of chlorine in disinfectants leads to the production of chloroform while bulk products PVC contribute to the production of chlorinated dibenzo p dioxins and dibenzofurans when they are burned Those against argue that chlorine and many chlorinated compounds are essential in the control of human health the prevention of disease transmitted through drinking water that has not been disinfected and that chlorinated compounds are indispensable intermediates in many production processes representing a vast economic value But such discussions often ignore the fact that Nature contributes significantly to the production of chlorinated organic compounds More than 1000 such compounds are known and their contribution to the biogeochemical cycling of chlorine is underestimated Chlorine is organically bound in large quantities to humic materials and natural production mechanisms are known for low molecular weight compounds methyl chloride chloroform chlorinated dibenzo p dioxins and dibenzofurans The role of these compounds in the environment is largely unknown Naturally Produced Organohalogens gives a complete overview of the present state of knowledge on the subject giving a much needed balance to the argument sketched out above *Documents of the ...
